

DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

GEORGE A. AKERLOF

For "What They Were Thinking Then and Its Consequences: A Perspective on Macroeconomics Over the Past 60 Years," submitted to The Journal of Economic Perspectives.

I know of no financial, ideological or political stake that would constitute any conflict of interest related to the submitted article.

1. This submission has received no financial support outside my employment at Georgetown University.

2. Over the past three years I have received significant financial support from the Canadian Institute for Advanced Research, Princeton University Press, the MacArthur Foundation and the Universidad de Alcalá, Madrid. Within the past three years, my wife, Janet Yellen, has received significant financial support from the the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve, as her compensation as Chair. She is Distinguished Fellow in Residence with the Economic Studies Program at the Brookings Institution and she has received significant financial support from Washington Speakers Bureau. I do not know of any financial, ideological, or political stake relative to this article that would constitute any conflict of interest from these activities related to the submitted article.

3. I have been associate editor of the Quarterly Journal of economics, co-editor of Behavioural Social Policy and honorary editor of the Review of Behavioral Economics. I am also on the Executive Committee of ERINN (Economic Research on Identity, Norms and Narratives). I have served as co-director and Fellow of the Program on Social Interaction, Identity and Well-Being of the Canadian Institute for Advanced Research. My wife, Janet Yellen is on the Executive Committee of the American Economic Association and the President-elect of that association. I do not know of any financial, ideological, or political stake from any of these associations that would constitute any conflict of interest related to the submitted article.

4. My son, Robert Akerlof, has received a grant from the Institute for New Economic Thinking, granted to Warwick University, where he is Associate Professor. He is also an Associate of ERINN, mentioned above. Again, I do not know if any financial, ideological, or political stake from any of these associations relative to this article that would constitute any conflict of interest.

5. There is no data in the submitted article that comes from other than public sources. There is thus no conflict of interest.